♦ MIYAGI Satoshi

(Stage Director/General Artistic Director of the Shizuoka Performing Arts Center) [Japan]

Mr. MIYAGI Satoshi founded the Ku Na'uka Theater Company in 1990, attracting attention for his unique direction approach in which two actors play a single role at the same time, with one performing the movements and the other speaking the lines. He then became the General Artistic Director of the Shizuoka Performing Arts Center (SPAC) in 2007. He focuses on theater as a "window to the world" through the production of his own works, as well as inviting works from throughout the world that sharply critique modern society.

Works that particularly attracted major international attention include the production of the Indian epic Mahabharata — Nalacharitam — at the Festival d'Avignon in 2014, and the production of the Greek tragedy Antigone at the same festival in 2017. His approach to direction, which fuses a contemporaneous textual interpretation of the Japanese view of life and death with the physical techniques and stylistic beauty of Asian theater, has received great acclaim and made him a world-class stage director who enjoys a constant stream of invitations to produce and direct performances. Accordingly, we chose to award Mr. Miyagi the Japan Foundation Award in recognition of his major contribution to international mutual understanding through his activities and to encourage his future endeavors.

OGAWA Yoko (Novelist) [Japan]

Since her debut in 1988, Ms. OGAWA Yoko has devoted 35 years of her life to writing novels, continuously producing both full-length works and short stories. The world depicted in her works, such as The Housekeeper and the Professor and The Memory Police, seems to be a space of quiet set at a distance from busy modern society. However, the characters that appear are living universal stories of compassion, faced with the loss of memory or of life itself. Ms. Ogawa's works, written in elegant Japanese, have continued to excite the imaginations of translators in numerous other languages and gained the sympathy of readers the world over, with 36 works translated as of mid-2023 in a total of 37 languages. Continuously nominated for international literary prizes in recent years, Ogawa plays a major role in taking the lead for the next generation of Japanese writers. Accordingly, we chose to award Ms. Ogawa the Japan Foundation Award to encourage her continuing endeavors.

♦ Peruvian Japanese Association/Asociación Peruano Japonesa (APJ)

[Peru

On this the 150th year since the establishment of diplomatic relations between Japan and Peru, and the 124th year since the start of immigration, we must not forget about the Peruvian Japanese Association (APJ), which has supported a community of over 100,000 Peruvian Japanese people and worked to introduce the culture of Japan. Since the end of WWII, the APJ has promoted Japanese language education primarily via their Peruvian Japanese Cultural Center, and today serves as a hub for Japanese language education in the South American region.

The APJ has also served as a central player in Japan research and international dialogue through such activities as translating and publishing Japanese literary classics and planning dialogues between people of Japanese ancestry in the Central and South American region. They have also expanded their activities into the realm of medical care by establishing a general clinic within the Centro Cultural Peruano Japones, as well as the Peruvian Japanese Centennial Hospital to commemorate 100 years of immigration of Japanese people to the country.

On the occasion of the 150th anniversary of Japan-Peru relations, we believe that it is very timely to present the Japan Foundation Award to the APJ for their contributions in numerous domains.
